

The Statesman

KOLKATA · NEW DELHI · SILIGURI · BHUBANESWAR
Monday 10 May 2004

XIM course for techies

BHUBANESWAR, May 9. — The Xavier Institute of Management, Bhubaneswar, in association with the city-based networking company Nettech, will conduct a summer training programme for engineering students this summer.

The programme is a certificate programme in Network Management (Linux Environment). Dr Gopal Krishna Nayak, former Dean and professor of information system, is the programme coordinator.

More than 80 students from private and government engineering colleges of the state will participate in the programme beginning 17 May. The second batch of students will join the programme in the first week of June. Dr Nayak said: "In recent times, there is a growing demand for Linux in every area of IT industry, whether it is used as the OS behind Firewalls, Web servers, E-mail servers or even at desktops." — SNS